Ongoing writing

At the moment, I am preparing a monograph on freemasonry as a topic in 18th century press. Despite allegations of secrecy, freemasonry was an integrated part of press coverage in newspapers and educated journals throughout the century. What started with often revealing articles in newspapers and reviews of works on freemasonry in journals culminated at the end of the century in the development of two major specialized journals: Journal für Freymaurer, edited 1784-86 in Vienna and the Freemason's Magazine, edited 1793-96 in London. This monograph seeks to describe this development and offers rich comparative perspectives into the press landscape of Europe at the time.

Besides this project, I am working on an edition of the diaries and correspondence of Swedish diplomat Jacob Gustaf Pontusson De la Gardie (1768-1842) from his mission to Vienna around 1800.

Another commitment is the edition of exiled Swedish philosopher and writer Thomas Thorilds (1761-1808) works.
