

AT HOME Research Group

(to the right are list of project titles that are links to other websites/pages):

How is the ideological construction of 'home' produced and consumed through use?

How does house design meet the needs of an ageing population?

Question from Lucy?

What is the role of the architect in the design of the home and why do so few people use architects to design their homes?

How do we create intimacy between ourselves, our homes and our communities and how can that intimacy manifest itself upon the home environment?

Questions from Prue and Sarah?

The At Home group was initiated at the School of Architecture in 2010. It emerged out of mutual interests, shared discussions and concerns, previous individual and collective projects and research around the notion of home, housing, and communities.

Despite the topic's importance and its notable presence throughout the School of Architecture this work had so far not been consolidated. To address this, the expressed intent of the At Home group is to act as a catalyst for the various strands of interest that culminate in our different attitudes if the 'home'.
